Classics in Theories of Space

National Ph. D. course in Human geography, Spring Term - 2019

Course Organizers
Mekonnen Tesfahuney, Professor, Karlstad University (mete@kau.se)
Tomas Germundsson, Professor, Lund University (tomas.germundsson@keg.lu.se)
Richard Ek, Associate Professor, Lund University, Campus Helsingborg (richard.ek@ism.lu.se)

Guest lecturer: Professor Gillian Rose, University of Oxford

Course Syllabus
The present course offers advanced knowledge of spatial theories by examining key/classical texts on the subject. It is broadly structured along three major conceptions of space: (1) Spatial Science, (2) Humanistic Geographic Conceptions of Space, and (3) Relational conceptions of space. The course offers a (philosophical) history of conceptions of space as laid out by key protagonists. As such, the course is not only a journey through the canonical notions of space but also a mapping of the geographies of the disciplinary canon as well. The course consists of readings of a selection of classical texts, combined with parallel thematic lectures and seminars addressing the three key themes and related sub-themes. In addition to a final paper which will be presented in a course paper seminar, students will also submit critical readings of a selection of course literature in writing.

Course Schedule

Module 1: 7-8 March 2019 - Theme: Spatial Science
Venue: Karlstad University
5th of March 10-12 Lecture Richard Ek & Mekonnen Tesfahuney
5th of March 13-16 Literature Seminar. Text: David Harvey Explanation in Geography (1973[1969])

Module 2: 24-25 April 2019 - Theme: Humanistic Geographic Conceptions of Space
Venue: Lund University
26th of April 10-12 Lecture Tomas Germundsson
27th of April 10-12 Literature seminar Yi-Fu Tuan, Topophilia (1974)

Module 3: 14-15 May 2019 - Theme: Relational Theories of Space
Venue: Karlstad University
14th of May 13-15 Lecture/seminar Gillian Rose
15th of May 09-13 Paper Seminars
Readings (besides texts in the schedule above)

Tim Cresswell’s Geographic Thought. A Critical Introduction (2013) will be used as a general “reference and guide” to human geographic subject history for the course, complemented by:

Anne Buttimer’s Geography and the human spirit (1993).

Reference Literature

Crampton, Jeremy & Elden, Stuart eds. (2007) Space, Knowledge & Power. Aldershot: Ashgate

Foucault, Michel (1986/1967) “Of Other Spaces” Diacritics Spring, (6 pages)

Ord & Bild (1998) På Plats. Nr. 3 [Special Issues on Place]

